Paws In Need programs are off to a strong start in the first quarter of 2024 with 265 animals assisted!

We are pleased to report that our annual curbside pick-up Crab Feed fundraising event was a huge success. Many of those who purchased their dinners commented that they liked this take-out style format, so it is more than likely to be repeated next year. Thank you to all who partook in this popular event and we look forward to seeing you again next year.

Should I spay my dog before or after her first heat cycle?

That is a frequent question heard by veterinary providers from new dog owners. There are two schools of thought regarding this issue. We have included an excerpt from the Hastings Veterinary Hospital website in order to give pet owners some insights. We hope that this explanation will address the key question, namely, why spaying your dog before the first heat cycle is so important? In fact, reading the information provided below could not only save pet owners from spending thousands of dollars to treat a life-threatening condition, but also, prevent against the worst-case scenario: losing their beloved companion.

What is Pyometra?

Pyometra is an infection of the uterus. The infection is most commonly caused by E. coli, a type of bacteria which enter the uterus either due to a mild urinary infection, or from the normal bacterial flora of the lower reproductive tract. The condition is most likely to occur within 4-6 weeks after the female dog has been in estrus (heat cycle), which is why it is so important to spay female dogs before their first heat cycle.

Pyometra can be classified as open or closed. Closed Pyometra means that the entrance to the uterus is closed, so pus and debris is accumulating in the uterus, causing it to massively swell. Open Pyometra are cases where the infection is draining out through the vulva. This is less serious, as the uterus is not swelling up as pus can escape. Pyometra is life-threatening as the infection may become so severe it is fatal, and in closed Pyometra the uterus may rupture, causing severe bleeding and shock.

Symptoms

- Lethargy
- Increased drinking and urination
- Loss of appetite
- Vomiting
- Discharge from vulva

Treatment

The message is clear - The best way to treat and prevent Pyometra is to spay your female dog. During the spay procedure the ovaries and uterus are removed, and therefore dogs that have been spayed cannot develop Pyometra. Spaying is the only guaranteed way to prevent Pyometra – any non-spayed female dog is at risk of developing it. The spay operation on a young, healthy dog is much safer than surgery on an ill dog suffering from Pyometra. Also, elective spaying has the benefit of reducing the risk that a female dog will suffer from mammary tumors later in life. Therapy using appropriate antibiotics is required if a dog develops a Pyometra infection.

Steps for training your dog (Courtesy of the Seeing Eye").

- 1. Sit. It's the first command a puppy should learn.
- 2. Stay. Move one step away at a time.
- 3. Come. Watch them run to you.
- 4. Down. Use a gentle pull to reinforce.
- 5. Go to your place. Every dogs needs to learn this.
- 6. Wait. No bolting out of open doors.
- 7. Nipping. Correct with gentle scolding, and praise when it stops.
- 8. Barking. A quick pull or tug, and "quiet" gives them the message
- 9. Jumping. Correct with a push to the chest and "Off".
- 10. Pulling. Use a stop-and-sit correction until the dog adjusts to your pace.

Worried about what is in those store-bought dog cookies? Well now you can bake your own. Here is a recipe that you can modify to your liking by, for example, adding sweet potato, peanut butter or pumpkin to the mix.

2 ½ cups Whole Wheat Flour
1 Tsp White Sugar
¼ Tsp Salt
6 Tbsp Margarine
1 Whole Egg
½ Cup Non-Fat Powdered Milk (mixed with ½ cup of cool water)

• If desired, add one cube or chicken or beef bouillon to recipe for flavor.

Mix all ingredients. Knead for 3 to 5 minutes or until dough forms a nice ball. Roll about $\frac{1}{2}$ " thick and cut into desired shapes. Bake on a lightly greased cookie sheet for thirty minutes at 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

And remember those cookies are for your dog!

Grant awards are highly competitive. So, amidst a number of deserving nonprofit candidates and for the second time in 3 years, Paws In Need was extremely grateful to be a recipient of grant awards from both Rotary Clubs of Pleasanton.

Paws In Need is thrilled to be the recipient of an extremely generous grant award as a result of the "Share the Spirit" annual holiday campaign run by the Bay Area News Group. This campaign is one of the important ways that East Bay Times readers can show their support for non-profits in Alameda and Contra Costa counties that provide critical services to members of these communities in their time of need. As part of this campaign, an article was published in the East Bay Times last November as well as information posted on their website to share the success story of Max --a young German Shepherd abandoned at a neighborhood park and rescued by a loving family who then sought the aid of Paws In Need for low-cost neuter services.

In all, 20 non-profit groups participated in this campaign, and of those, Paws In Need was one of the top stories for raising funds to help meet its goal. The Board of Directors met earlier this March to decide upon the overall disbursement of funds to each group based on evaluating several criteria. Not only did Paws In Need surpass its goal but also the "Share the Spirit" campaign Board unanimously agreed that our organization was worthy of receiving additional funds to support our life-saving animal welfare programs. This outcome was totally unexpected and so greatly appreciated! These grant funds will go a long way towards assisting so many dogs, cats and struggling pet owners in need like the family who fell in love with Max!
